By his business tact and genial manner he has been able to increase his business so speedily that in so short a period as three years, we find him with three assistants and three delivery wagons and a store stocked with every conceivable commodity in his line, both domestic and foreign. In the line of Swedish canned goods, fish and fruits. We would call especial attention to all who desire those delicious eatables, as it is complete and at prices in reach of all. Stickoline will be found to supply a long felt want, as it can be put to no end of service and is always at hand, as it can be carried in the pocket without the least inconvenience. Besides mending china, glass, wooden or leather ware or sealing mailing matter, it is invaluable as a plaster for cuts and wounds, as it possesses great healing properties. Those contemplating a trip to any of the Scandinavian countries will find all desired information and assistance in regard to rates, time of sailing and accommodations at Mr. Hagberg's Agency of the Scandia Line of Steamships. Mr. Hagberg, outside of his business, leads a quiet Christian life with his family, belonging to the Republican Club and a number of benevolent associations.

Windsor House, J. W. Roche, Proprietor, Kearny Ave., Corner Halsted Street.—Mr. J. W. Roche, the proprietor of the above elegant hotel, was born in Elizabeth, raised in Kearny, and served his apprenticeship in Arlington, in the Beckett Machine Works, then known under the firm name of Beckett & McDowell, as a machinery moulder. In March, 1888, he had the foundation for the Windsor Hotel laid, and in the following September he had the pleasure of opening it to the public as a first-class hotel, with accommodations for thirteen steady guests. The hotel is situated midway between Arlington and Kearny, on one of the best macadamized roads in the country, and is, therefore, very popular to those who take advantage of a ride along this seven and a half mile drive, with its ever changing and beautiful panorama views, as its sheds and stables offer rest and feed to their animals, and the house an inviting repast or refreshment to their masters. Rapid transit cars pass the door, thus making it convenient for guests to reach all points of interest speedily and comfortably. Mr. Roche manages the Windsor House personally in all its details, thus assuring polite and immediate attention to all, and is a genial gentleman, who makes a very bright and entertaining host. On sporting matters especially the rod, gun and dog—those who are fond of this sport, will find in him one who is ever ready to impart useful advice or information, as he is always well informed on them and is a member of the several Gun Clubs.

Mrs. Pullen & Miss Whyte, Millinery and Dressmaking, French Taylor System. No. 148 Elm Street.—An establishment at which good fitting and durable clothing is made, at moderate prices, cannot fail to be well patronized when once it is known to the public, and it is therefore no matter of surprise, that the store and parlor occupied by these ladies should be a decided favorite with the public. Their specialty of fitting has given them a reputation for success in that direction, and they do not hesitate to say that they are more capable in that line than any one in this vicinity. Their millinery department is always supplied with a full line of hats both trimmed and untrimmed and a visit to this store by those who appreciate satisfactory goods and low prices, also prompt and courteous service will satisfy you of the facts mentioned. They are prepared to take orders at reasonably short notice, and invariably have goods ready at the time promised.

Henry D. Plate, Real Estate Owner, Houses and Lots for Sale, West Arlington, N. J.—Mr. Henry D. Plate has been a resident of Arlington since 1881. In 1886 he bought the Riesman old homestead, and, with his family, has made this beautiful and picturesque site his permanent residence since that time. Mr. Plate is a gentleman universally esteemed for his many good qualities, business integrity and strong adherence to principle. He is public-spirited, taking, as he does, a lively interest in anything which will add to the advancement of this charming and prosperous town, and spares no expense or labor to make his tenants or those who buy their homes from him comfortable and happy. He has sunk an enormous artesian well, two hundred feet deep, and over this built a large, handsome wind-mill, for the purpose of supplying those on his property with abundance of pure water direct into their houses. His houses have all the latest improvements—hot and cold water, stationary wash tubs, hot air heaters, closets, and flagged side-walks, along which are set shade trees—and all this property is situated from two to five minutes from the railroad station. Do you want more? You can't have it! for nothing more desirable can be found. Arlington is a pretty place, no matter what part you are in. and the views (everyone knows "views" is plural, but when you are speaking of the "views" of Arlington you want to multiply the plural by a very large figure) to be had of her and from her are truly superb and delightful, and those who visit Mr. Plate's property will find ample cause to testify to the veracity of the above. We leave our wives or loved ones a policy in an insurance company. Are we sure they will receive it? We leave them an investment in some corporation. Ditto? No.! But if we provide them with a home, all paid for, we are sure they will have it: for when we leave, we leave it with them. Mr. Plate is also proprietor of the business conducted under his name at No. 258 West 32d St., New York City, for importing corks and cork woods and manufacture of machine-cut corks. This enterprise was started in 1860 by Mr. Plate and father. and in 1865 Henry D. Plate took sole control and continued it till the present time with unbroken success. To all desiring to buy a house or lot, Mr. Plate offers a cordial welcome to visit his place.
